Chapter 1 by Kori Rusley

She sat alone, clutching the phone tightly in her hands. She looked frantically at all the windows, expecting to see a dark figure. She turned back around to see a man looking down at her.

Chapter 2 by Louise Wallace

She traced the lines on his face with the tip of her trembling finger. Lines that held stories he would never speak but that replayed in flickering sepia tone images every time he closed his eyes; his own nightmare picture show.

Chapter 3 by Kori Rusley

I wonder what he was thinking, why he was doing it. I didn't know where this was going. I wanted to live. The last time I spoke to my parents it was fight and my brother too. I couldn't end like this. It wasn't right, it wasn't okay. I had to fight.

Chapter 4 by Louise Wallace

I looked into his eyes and tried to picture the words that could penetrate the hatred and fear. I wondered about his family, his love, his life. My hope sank as I realised he has given it all up to be here. His was a cold heart.
